Defending Biblical Christianity | Reasonable Faith

the most prominent evangelical apologists of our day in their Faith Has Its Reasons (Colorado Springs: NavPress, 2001). In order to round out your knowledge of the field of apologetics, you should avail yourself of this adjunct reading. I've structured Reasonable Faith around the loci communes of systematic theology.

Reasonable Faith - The Question of Whether or Not Religious Believing is Reasonable

Description : The question of whether or not religious believing is reasonable is one of the most important of all human concerns. This book will explore a virtue-theoretic approach, i.e., the stress on the role of agent-based intellectual virtues, to the justification of religious belief.

In the latest edition of Reasonable Faith, Craig offers a number of persuasive arguments for believing that God does, in fact, exist. Unfortunately, we can only skim the surface of these arguments here. But if you want to go deeper, his book is a great place to start.

Reasonable Faith - probe.org

Description : Christians are often accused of having "blind faith." Looking at various questions relating to apologetics the author attempts to make the case that Christianity is unique and stands the test of rational and reasonable arguments. There is no conflict between faith and reason.

the foundations of faith and the credibility of the Christian revelation (DS 3019, 3033). And against the rationalists Vatican I attributed the full assurance of the act of faith to the power of divine grace enlightening the intellect and inspiring the will (DS 3010). The act was therefore reasonable without being a deliverance of pure reason.

FAITH AND REASON: FROM VATICAN I TO JOHN PAUL II

Note that a doxastic venture model of theistic faith reconciles faith as gift with faith's active components: the action is taking a faith-proposition to be true in practical reasoning; the gift provides the motivational resources for so doing, namely a firm belief in the truth of the faith-proposition, despite its lack of adequate evidential support.
