Shock: Biochemical, Pharmacological, and Clinical Aspects

Few pathologic phenomena, as shock, can originate from so many causes and involve so many complex physiologic mechanisms: The complexity of the phenomenon, thus, has resulted in extensive study and raised many uncertainties. Different conditions, such as hemorrhage, trauma, burns, bacterial

Abstract. The aim of the present study was to investigate the therapeutic effects of pharmacological inhibition of DDAH1 (dimethylarginine dimethylaminohydrolase 1), an enzyme that metabolizes endogenously produced nitric oxide synthase inhibitors, principally ADMA (asymmetric dimethylarginine).

This report is concerned with a pharmacologic and metabolic study of metrazol convulsive therapy in human subjects. It was found that the level of serum calcium and potassium remained almost unchanged before and after convulsive seizures.

Inflammatory responses involving Toll-like receptor signaling represent a key factor contributing to epileptogenesis. Thus, it is of particular interest to explore the relevance of toll-like receptor ligands and modulators, such as heat shock protein 70 (HSP70).
